<td>Kubernetes is becoming the de-facto standard on which to build applications. However, building applications on Kubernetes is hard. With Java still being a dominant language and skill set for enterprise applications, there is a growing need for a community to help organizations build effective enterprise applications on Kubernetes.</td>
<td>J4K.io brings together all open source communities, leading technologists, vendors, developers (all types), architects, IT leaders, and end users of enterprise applications on Kubernetes, to educate, exchange ideas, and promote solutions and innovations, with an emphasis on Java workloads.</td>
